President's Message

I feel proud & privileged to publish the 2nd issue of the News Letter of the ASI, Odisha Chapter. This issue will highlight the activities of our association since February 2014 following our state conference & would also highlight the forth coming events that are going to take place. I had shouldered one more responsibility ie; starting a new website for our state chapter which was successfully launched ie; www.asiodisha.org.in on 11th May 2014.

My 2nd dream was to have an electronic directory of surgeons of our state chapter. Even after repeated efforts none of our members have taken pain to upload their details in the website. I would request our esteemed members to login to our website www.asiodisha.org.in & in the home page visit the icon "Member update form" & upload their details for eg; Name, Address, Mobile No, Email address & upload their passport photograph. This will enable us to interact & socialize amongst our fellow surgeons. I need your kind help & co-operation in order to make this directory a dream achievement for me, during my tenure as presidentship. How to upload in the website is mentioned in the back page of this news letter.

Long Live ASI

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF A SURGEON

The Political Touch :

A villager from Bengal met the then Chief Minister P. C. Sen and requested him to touch his enlarged hydroceles.

The Chief Minister could sense that there has been some misunderstanding. He explained to the visitor that his predecessor Dr. B. C. Roy was a medical practitioner but he was not. He advised the villager to consult a doctor. The villager was however adamant and wanted the CM to touch his hydrocele. A visibly annoyed CM politely advised the caller not to entertain superstitious beliefs and politicians including ministers were only ordinary mortals and not God-men with divine touch.

The villager would have nothing of it and was firm in his request that the CM touch his hydroceles. When pressed to speak out, the villager said: “People in my village say that anything the Government touches vanishes and I therefore want the CM to oblige”

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF A SURGEON

How inventive?

An American, an Englishman and a Japanese fellow were discussing their respective countries over drink at a London pub one evening. The English fellow mentioned how that British medicine had progressed so far that doctors recently had taken a single liver and cut it into six pieces then transplanted it into six separate men in need of a healthy liver. This had resulted in six new workers in the job market. At this, the Japanese guy said that in his country doctors had cut a lung into twelve pieces, transplanted these into twelve people in need of healthy lungs, thereby putting twelve new people in the job market. Not to be outdone, the American said, "That's nothing. In the U. S., we took one asshole, made it President, and now there are 10 million people in the market for a job!"

Sardar and Sperm :

Ques Joke What is the similarity between a SPERM and a SARDAR.

Ans: ONE IN A MILLION GET MATURED.

Sperm counting :

There was this guy that went to the doctor to get his sperm counted. The lady behind the desk handed him a jar and said, "Bring it back tomorrow, full." He says, "Okay, I'll be back tomorrow then."

Well he goes home and comes back the next day, and he hands the woman the jar.

She says, "Nothing's in it." The man responds, "Well, I went home and I tried with my right hand and I tried with my left hand and nothing happened. I called my wife into the room, and she tried with her right hand and she tried with her left hand. Nothing still happened. Well, we called our neighbor and she came over, and she tried with her right hand and she tried with her left hand, and still nothing happened.

And the woman behind the counter looked stunned and asked, "You asked your neighbor over to help you!?" And he says, "Yeah, we couldn't get the jar open."
